

ELIJAH T. JOHNSON

Prince William County's

Deputy County Executive, for Human Services

Summary of Responsibility

Mr. Johnson is responsible for providing administrative oversight of Prince William County's human services agencies, including Community Services, Area Agency on Aging, Criminal Justice Services, Department of Social Services and the Office of Housing and Community Development. He is also the liaison with the following state-supported human services agencies; Prince William Area Public Health District, Juvenile Courts Service Units and Virginia Cooperative Extension and works with the many community organizations who provide valuable service for Prince William County residents.

Prior to accepting his current position, Mr. Johnson served as Prince William County's Director for the Office of Housing and Community Development (OHCD).

David McGettigan, Sr. AICP is the Long-Range Planning Manager for the Prince William County Planning Office. His work in the Long Range Planning Division includes managing comprehensive plan amendments, special studies and other planning efforts. He also manages the technology support group for the Planning Office providing GIS services for planning projects. He has a Bachelor of Arts from Virginia Tech in Urban Affairs and a Masters Degree in Planning from the University of Virginia

Patrick Mauney serves as Executive Director of the Rappahannock-Rapidan Regional Commission following his appointment in 2016. Prior to his current role, Patrick worked as the Commission's GIS Program Manager for ten years. He is responsible for administration and proactive guidance to the Commission's 21-member Board, and leadership and management of the organization's programmatic functions in transportation, environmental, housing/homeless services, and community development planning. Patrick also serves as a board member for the Virginia Association of Planning District Commissions, Council for Rural Virginia, GO Virginia Region 9, and Aging Together. He is a native Virginian and a graduate of Mary Washington College (B.A., Geography) and University of Nebraska-Omaha (M.A., Public Administration).

Andrew is the Assistant Chief of Planning with Fauquier County. He focuses on long range and comprehensive planning including: capital, fiscal and economic impact analyses; demographic studies; as well as community visioning and plan development. Previously he had a similar focus while working in Spotsylvania County. He holds a Bachelor's Degree in Economics and History from Wesleyan University, a Master of Urban and Regional Planning from the University of California, Irvine, as well as additional graduate studies within the University of California system.